Postmedia Network Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Postmedia Network Canada Corp. (TSX:PNC.A, PNC.B), is a Canadian newsmedia company representing more than 140 brands across multiple print, online, and mobile platforms. Award-winning journalists and innovative product development teams bring engaging content to millions of people every week whenever and wherever they want it. This exceptional content, reach and scope offers advertisers and marketers compelling solutions to effectively reach target audiences.

Postmedia owns the bulk of the media outlets in Canada. This includes both mainstream news, and many smaller ones. It is also heavily subsidized by the Government, which in reality, means the taxpayers. Is that the reason why they don’t properly cover this so-called “pandemic” in Canada?

About the digital news subscription tax credit

Proposed changes to legislation announced

On April 17, 2020, the Department of Finance announced draft legislative proposals that would make adjustments to the journalism tax measures introduced in Budget 2019. These changes will help ensure that the measures achieve their initial objectives. The Canada Revenue Agency will administer the legislation on the basis of these proposed amendments, notwithstanding that the legislation may only be enacted at a later date.

The digital news subscription tax credit is a non-refundable tax credit for amounts paid by individuals to a qualified Canadian journalism organization (QCJO) for qualifying subscription expenses after 2019 and before 2025.

It was outlined earlier, some of the taxpayer subsidies that media companies can get. These include:

[A] Digital News subscription Tax Credit (15% rebate)

[B] Refundable Labour Tax Credit (up to 25% of salaries)

[C] Canada Periodical Fund (75% of expenses, up to $1.5M)

[D] Special Measures for Journalism (75% of expenses, up to $1.5M)

Now, we have the Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy, which is even more handouts in order to keep otherwise unprofitable media solvent. In fairness, Postmedia does bring in over $100 million per quarter, according to its financials. But one has to wonder what strings are attached to these grants, such as the type of coverage provided to the public.

Granted, many businesses that have nothing to do with this industry are eligible as well for the CEWS.

Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy
On April 11, 2020, the Government of Canada passed the Canada Emergency Wage Subsidy ("CEWS") to support employers facing financial hardship as measured by certain revenue declines as a result of the COVID19 pandemic. CEWS currently provides a reimbursement of compensation expense to June 2021 provided the applicant has met the applicable criteria, which has been established up to March 13, 2021. During the three months ended November 30, 2020 the Company recognized a recovery of compensation expense of $6.6 million related to CEWS. As at November 30, 2020, the Company has an amount receivable related to CEWS of $5.6 million included in trade and other receivables on the condensed consolidated statement of financial position (August 31, 2020 – $13.0 million).

Journalism Tax Credits

On June 21, 2019 the federal budget was approved which contained measures specific to the news media industry including a journalism tax credit whereby qualifying Canadian news organizations may apply for a refundable labour tax credit applied to the salaries of journalists. In December 2019, the Canada Revenue Agency ("CRA") issued the Application for Qualified Canadian Journalism Organization Designation and guidance related to the eligibility, qualifications and determination of the refundable labour tax credit which was further clarified in April 2020. On November 19, 2020, the Company received its designation as a Qualified Canadian Journalism Organization.

On October 2, 2019, the Government of Quebec announced a similar refundable labour tax credit to be applied to the salaries of journalists in Quebec provided an entity receives an eligibility certificate issued by Investissement Québec.

Both the federal and Quebec journalism tax credit legislation include provisions to reduce the qualifying salaries and wages eligible for the credit for other forms of assistance received including CEWS. During the three months ended November 30, 2020, the Company recognized a recovery of compensation expense of $1.5 million related to the journalism tax credits (2019 – $2.4 million). As at November 30, 2020, the aggregate journalism tax credit receivable of $12.3 million is included in trade and other receivables on the condensed consolidated statement of financial position (August 31, 2020 – $10.8 million). The recognition of the journalism tax credits receivable is based on the Company's interpretation of the federal budget and the related legislation. Actual amounts received may differ from the amounts currently recorded based on future CRA and/or Revenue Québec interpretations of eligibility, qualifications and determination of the tax credits.

To its credit, Postmedia is open about the subsidies it gets. They build into the financials the anticipated refunds from the Canada Revenue Agency. Now that they have their status as Qualified Canadian Journalism Organization, this seems inevitable.

This is hardly all of them, as this has been going on for a very long time. The search came up with 216 donations to these various groups. Given all of these outlets that are controlled by Postmedia, and propped up by Government subsidies, is it any wonder that there is no real criticism of this “pandemic”?

Postmedia Completes Recapitalization Transaction

October 5, 2016 (TORONTO) – Postmedia Network Canada Corp. ("PNCC" or the "Company") is pleased to announce that the Company's previously announced recapitalization transaction (the "Recapitalization Transaction"), described in the Company's management information circular dated August 5, 2016, was completed effective today upon implementation of a court-approved plan of arrangement under the Canada Business Corporations Act. The Recapitalization Transaction includes, among others, the following key elements:

- the 8.25% senior secured notes issued by Postmedia Network Inc. ("PNI" and, together with PNCC, "Postmedia") due August 2017 have been extended by approximately four years to July 2021 and reduced to C$225 million with a cash repayment of approximately C$78 million at par;
- all of the 12.50% senior secured notes issued by PNI due July 2018 (the "Notes") in the aggregate principal amount of approximately US$268.6 million, together with all interest accrued from and after July 15, 2016, have been exchanged for approximately 98% of the total number of voting shares and variable voting shares of the Company;
- the voting shares and variable voting shares of the Company have been consolidated on the basis of one post-consolidation variable voting share for every 150 pre-consolidation variable voting shares and one post-consolidation voting share for every 150 pre-consolidation voting shares;
- approximately US$84.4 million of new capital has been invested in the form of new U.S. dollar denominated second lien secured notes due July 2023 with no cash interest for the first three years, subject to certain conditions;

In return for being able to get around millions in debt, Postmedia has had to give up 98% of the stock value to its creditors. Or rather, it allowed so much stock to be printed that current shareholders saw their investments plunge. This came from a court approved arrangement in 2016. Interestingly, Postmedia had lobbied the Federal Government over the years. One of the subjects was allowing foreign investment into the company.

As an aside, one of the firms lobbying was Capital Hill Group, the same firm that is helping G4S get more security contracts from Governments.

All of these subsidies and political connections may explain why this media conglomerate does no real journalism surrounding this “pandemic”. The Directors and various politicians are all connected, and no one wants to lose their tax subsidies.

It’s Canadians who lose. Instead of acting as a check on government overreach, media talking heads like Brian Lilley are all too willing to parrot back the talking points they are handed.

My little town paper, one that I trusted for balanced reporting and tough journalism went the way of the DODO bird as soon as this Covid insanity broke loose. I've been BLOCKED from their social media platform and unable to comment. It appears they have no interest in facts coming out of government websites that might show some interesting statistics that are not being reported.

The small time paper is THE VOICE OF PELHAM and if anyone knows if they are receiving funding to push this agenda, or how I could find out, it sure would be appreciated.
